

I firmly believe the FCC should not implement any telephone privacy proposal that would lessen Indiana's or any other state's telephone privacy law.

I used to receive so many telemarketing calls, I couldn't count them. The worst part was that there was a large number of disconnects because of the way their computers dialed many numbers at one time, and if someone else answered the call, all the other attempts were just hung up on.

I have a right to privacy in my own home, and these people steal that from me and everyone else they harass with these intrusive calls.

The law should prohibit any of these types of calls, even if I happen to do business with one of the calling companies. If I need to contact that company or require any information from them I will initiate contact. I want them to stay out of my home. They and their telemarketing calls are not at all welcome here.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.
